Youth and Age walked together through the Hall of Life. And Youth was light of step and eager-eyed, for the short time that he had spent in the Hall had promised well for the future. He had played with his friends in the cozy rooms near the entrance—rooms so delightful that it was only recently that he had asked to leave them for the loftier and more distant ones he had heard about. Age had granted this request with the greatest reluctance, for he had thought in his heart,

"Alas, as Youth explores the rooms of the Hall, I fear he will lose his awe of me."

But aloud he had said,

"Very well, you may go; but I shall guide you; my advice will be invaluable, for I have walked far down the Hall; I know its laws and customs."

So they had started—Youth, self-confident, alert, questioning; Age, ever watchful, ever fearful of that questioning.

Along the passageway in which they walked were innumerable rooms, but despite the crowds which thronged the Hall, few of these were open. And it was always into the most crowded that Age guided his charge.

"The room we just passed so hastily seemed unusual and very interesting. Why did we not visit it?" queried Youth.

"Unusual, yes," replied Age, "but the few people who frequent this place do not conform to our ideas. They are freaks. We have nothing to do with them. Let us hasten."

But Youth soon paused before a closed door, beautifully ornamented, and examined the lock, which was contrived with great cunning. Age hastened to say:

"There is no key for this door; we cannot enter; let us go on."

"Ah, but there is lovely music beyond the door," cried Youth, "only give me time and a few tools. I will make a key!"

"If the Maker of the Hall had intended man to enter, he would have provided a key," declared Age solemnly, and he hurried Youth into a room which was full of music, brilliance and laughter. But when Youth perceived that the brilliance was that of gaudy decorations, that the music was not true music, and that the laughter covered a restless desire for unfound happiness, he turned away disheartened.

Soon, however, he came to a massive door bearing a heavy knocker and an inscription in a strange tongue. After he had marveled for a while at the excellence of the artist's workmanship, he put forth his hand to lift the knocker. But Age, greatly alarmed, prevented him:

"Fool, can you not see the cobwebs that cover this door?" No one has ever entered. To do so would be to go against the excellent customs which I, who know, am handing on to you." So saying, he took Youth into a room full of people who were so intent upon what they were doing that they looked neither to the left nor to the right, nor did they know whether or not they were happy.

Then Youth looked about him and observed not only that most of the open rooms were overcrowded, but that some of them were ugly, some over elaborate, and some, once lovely, were now in need of repair. And he pointed these things out to his companion and said:

"How is it that you have dwelt so long in this Hall and have done nothing to make it beautiful for those who inhabit it now, and for those who shall come to it in the future?"

And Age replied,

"I have made myself what I am without grumbling about the Hall. The kinds of success that I have won, are they not good enough for you—they and the ways by which I won them?"

edication

Between Age and Youth there is a constant struggle. The one strives by wheedling and authoritorian device to assert and maintain an ascendancy that years alone have given it. The other, resisting control by the ideals, traditions, and customs of former generations, attempts to break away from established rules of conduct, to open the doors upon unexplored realms of possible thought, and to live according to new ideals. The success of Youth in this contest is of vital importance to the race, for therein lies our only hope of progress. But the foundation for our hope often seems unsound, indeed. For Youth, absorbed in its rebellion against the restraints imposed upon it by Age, does not realize the necessity of forming new restraints of its own. Revolt, to be significant, must not only be against something; this negative aspect of revolt should be guided by positive objectives. In its eagerness to open the doors to truer Truth which Nature and Tradition have kept closed, Youth is indeed glorious. But this eagerness is not enough; being undirected, its energies are soon squandered. Only when Youth knows what it wants, only when it has set up definite objectives, justified by Science, can it, with the aid of Science, open the doors that will make possible finer, truer living in the Hall of Life. It is, then, to a splendid, purposeful, valiant Spirit of Youth that we dedicate

FINE ARTS DEPARTMENT

The Normal College is very proud of its excellent Fine Arts Department. It occupies the whole second floor of the Administration Building. In the art gallery one can usually find an exhibit where paintings, posters, textiles, and other things of artistic interest from all over the country are on display. Besides these there are, from time to time, exhibitions of the best work done in our own department which are of interest not only to our students, but also to any visitors who may be on the campus.

The students are directed in their work by instructors who are true artists and who thoroughly understand the principles that make up Fine Arts in all of its forms.

The library is equipped with a list of valuable books on subjects of interest to Art students. The department offers courses of unusual and varied interest which are valuable in an artistic training. There is a splendid opportunity for practice teaching in the grades of the Training School.

INDUSTRIAL ARTS DEPARTMENT

The Industrial Art Department is helping to train teachers of today to take their places in the modern school which endeavors to teach the child to use not only his brain, but also his hands. The industrial school is gradually gaining in popularity and in service to the people of the United States.

All kinds of manual arts are taught here, so that a student receives a very complete training. The teachers in the department are very competent and make their courses extremely interesting. There are many calls for teachers of these subjects, and students specializing in the department are able to secure splendid positions. A graduate remembers with a great deal of pleasure the hours spent in the class rooms located in the basements of the Training School and the Administration Building.

CONSERVATORY OF MUSIC

The Conservatory of Music has its headquarters in Pease Auditorium under the very able and inspiring direction of Professor Alexander. This year, besides its usual performances, the Normal College Choir sang in Cass Technical High School on April 13th before the National Conference of Music Supervisors. Professor Alexander arranged a program of three excerpts from the Bach B Minor Mass and everal alla cappella masterpieces selected from the Christmas Music.

The Conservatory was able to secure some very exceptional and distinguished artists for its concert season this year. Such musicians as Carl Flesch, Wanda Landowska, and Elizabeth Rethberg cannot be heard every day, so that the college was very fortunate to have them here.

The String Ensemble passed a very successful year under the direction of Mrs. Edith H. Irion. Its public programs were of especial interest in the chain of recitals. The Conservatory hopes to make the Ensemble a permanent organization.

THE LIBRARY

A happy incident in the very early days of the library is symbolic of the appreciation of our students and of their constant and generous loyalty.

In the seven years following its establishment the library had grown to 1,500 volumes, the number of students being about 400, when on the Friday night of October 28th, 1859, the old bell which now hangs in the tower, and at that time daily called the school together, rang out a hurried fire peal. In the morning nothing was left of the building but the four charred walls.

The building was quickly restored, but no moneys were left for equipment. The following year, with the coming of the Civil War, help was sought in vain, and the students staged their dramatic venture. Calling a mass meeting on the campus on the very ground where the present library stands, amid great speeches and applause, it was enthusiastically voted that each student should give an added dollar in fees both terms in the following year to buy books. The story was told to the present writer by an old man who was visiting his Alma Mater, and his eyes brightened as he recalled the memorable occasion and his own youthful eloquence.

Our students certainly solved the primary problem of book. May they not in further suggestions bring the library to completion? With its 60,000 volumes, and fitting service in their administration, the great want today is a comfortable library building worthy of the Michigan State Normal College.

EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

The Education Department has a distinct place in the teachers' college. It has an obligation to the state which makes it responsible for the graduation of students who will become efficient teachers.

Modern systems of education demand that the teacher understand thoroughly the principles of teaching and psychology that have been set forth by educational leaders. The department offers some very profitable courses for the general student which are made compulsory by the college because of their recognized value to every teacher. In addition, one may elect courses in ethics, social psychology, individual differences, educational tests and measurements, special education for defective children, rural education, and many other extremely interesting and worth-while subjects which aim to prepare the student for some particular kind of teaching.

The department is rapidly growing larger and performing greater service to the student. As a result, there will, doubtless, be a marked increase in the efficiency of the teachers of Michigan.

ENGLISH DEPARTMENT

The English Department is doing a great service in helping the students acquire a larger and a finer appreciation of the better things of life. Its numerous courses vary from grammar to Shakespearean comedy, and are taught by a staff of about thirty teachers who are at all times at the service of the hundreds of students enrolled in these classes throughout the year. The students graduating from this department have a very broad field in which to work.

America is a cosmopolitan nation, but throughout the country the peoples of all races are learning to speak English. It is generally recognized that parents in families of foreign birth learn from the children. And where do the children learn? They learn English from teachers in the public schools who have been trained in our colleges. What an opportunity there is for a young person graduating from the English department to be of service in the lives of these people, helping them not only to speak our language, but also to understand our American ideals and customs, so that they may be true citizens of this great democracy.

The Geography Department is one of the best-equipped departments on the campus. Because of this and the strong faculty which carries on the work, it is known far and wide. Professor Jefferson is known to be a true leader in his subject. His study and experience make him an authority. The Normal College may well be proud to have such a man as a member of its faculty to direct the study of students who are going out into the state to teach boys and girls one of the fundamental subjects in our modern education.

HISTORY DEPARTMENT

There are two schools of historians in the world today; one believing, as did Carlyle, that History is the record of the achievements of a few outstanding men; the other school contending, as did Tolstoi, that History is the advance of decline, not leaders but peoples, either as races or as nations.

Both schools, regardless of the contention that exist between them, unite with James Harvey Robinson in declaring that, "Through a knowledge of the history of mankind, we shall gain an appreciation of the world in which we live, an insight into the evils which the world now suffers, as well as a promising means for alleviating them, not because the past would furnish precedents of conduct, but because our conduct would be based on a comprehension of existing conditions founded on a knowledge of the past."

The History Department of this college is peculiarly fitted to further this philosophy of history; not only because of the character and capability of its faculty members, but also because of the wide variety of courses offered.

She should be able to clothe herself artistically, to prepare delicious viands for her family and friends, to surround herself with modest comfort and beauty. She should have discovered the magic that changes a house into a home and makes her value above rubies.

LATIN DEPARTMENT

The Latin Department, which has its headquarters in the main building, is one of the most outstanding departments in the Normal College. It is often said that Latin is a dead language, but with Dr. D'Ooge as head of the department, it becomes one of literary culture and historic interest.

The Latin Department has increased its scope to meet the needs of students in its own and other departments. It offers courses in Word Study, Roman Private Life, Roman Topography, Roman Political Institutions, Mythology, Greek Art, and Greek Drama. The department library is exceptionally fine, containing standard works on nearly every topic connected with classical literature, several hundred lantern slides and pictures, and considerable illustrative material of archæological interest from Italy.

Students from this department have established a creditable record as Latin teachers throughout the state. The supply is seldom large enough to meet the demand, and capable students specializing in this department are certain of good positions.

NATURAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT

The Natural Science Department aims to help students have a better understanding and appreciation of life through nature that they may not only live more happily themselves, but also that they may be better able to guide and direct the lives of their own students.

Courses in Botany, Zoology, Biology, Nature Study, Geology, Physiology, and Agriculture are offered by the department. The faculty is very competent because of a thorough knowledge of the subjects taught, and also because of the interest shown in helping the students understand them.

The laboratories offer many interesting opportunities in addition to the class work. One of the most enjoyable features of the department is the chance for field trips which help one to learn more completely and rapidly the wonders of nature than in the usual class-room way.

MATHEMATICS DEPARTMENT

The Mathematics Department is one of the oldest on the campus, but it is very up-to-date in its ideas. It has grown in size and kept pace with the times as it has grown older. It has classes in surveying, slide rule, and statistics which prove this. It has a very adequate and interesting library of books on mathematical subjects.

Students specializing in this department are able to secure splendid positions in the junior and senior high schools of the state. Often graduates secure positions as superintendents and high school principals.

Its instructors take a vital interest in the students and in campus activities. Every one recognizes Professor Barnhill as the leader of our own Normal College Band. The others also have their special interests, although they may not be so conspicuous.

MODERN LANGUAGE DEPARTMENT

The Modern Language Department is one of the old and established departments of the Normal College, being now in its sixty-eighth year of existence. The last few years have marked an increased interest in this field of study; consequently that this year it has been necessary to increase the teaching force.

Those students whose privilege it is to study in this department find the instructors not only scholarly and replete with knowledge of the languages, but also true friends, ever ready to aid and counsel.

The facilities for study are excellent. There is ample opportunity for research in the library of the department, and for knowledge of current affairs in foreign countries through the foreign periodicals which are available.

In addition to the courses in the technique of language and literature, there is an advanced course in French, the study of the evolution of language, which is very fascinating and of great value. A more profound and abiding appreciation of the art of language is gained in all the courses of the department.

One who truly enters into the spirit of the department leaves it, at the end of a two or four-year sojourn, a World Citizen, introduced to the great literatures of the world, feeling a kinship with all people as brothers, and inspired to start forth in the conquest of great fields of language, education, and service.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION DEPARTMENT

The Physical Education Department is one of the largest on the campus. It develops some strong leaders in the Physical Education field. Its graduates are in demand in the cities and towns of the state. Any student who does good work is sure of a position at the end of his course. There is a big opportunity for students to hold positions as playground directors during the summer vacation.

The gymnasium, the center of the department's activities is always a busy and interesting place. In addition to their work there, the students spend a great deal of time in the Science building and in getting a good general education.

The Physical Education graduate has a splendid opportunity to promote health, and in this way to help the American nation to be a strong, healthy, and democratic country.

CHEMISTRY DEPARTMENT

The Chemistry Department is one of the strongest in the College. It offers one year of high school and four years of college Chemistry. Seven rooms are devoted to the department, including the well-stocked laboratories.

Since all the courses are given credit at the universities, many preparing for dentistry, medicine, and the like, take their first year here. The Chemistry fee is small and the privileges numerous.

The library of this department occupies one room and is well-equipped with the best books on all branches of Chemistry.

The Chemistry Club is one of the oldest and most active clubs on the campus. Every Spring the members visit some chemical industries at Detroit or Toledo.

DEPARTMENT OF PHYSICS AND ASTRONOMY

The Science Building is the home of several very active and interesting departments. One of these is that of Physics and Astronomy which is most fortunate in having Dr. Gorton at its head. His untiring efforts and splendid enthusiasm have helped to bring about the success of the department.

One of the most active organizations on the campus is the General Science Colloquium Club, formerly called the General Science Round Table. The activities of the club are most wisely and efficiently carried on under the direction of Dr. Gorton.

The course in Elementary Astronomy offered by Dr. Gorton is a very popular one. No special mathematical knowledge is necessary for full enjoyment and understanding of the work. Dr. Gorton also offers a course in Advanced Astronomy for those who wish to continue the study. Any teacher, especially one of grade work, will find added interest in her teaching if she is able to help her pupils understand the science of the heavenly bodies.

A student of Physics is able to receive an excellent start in his work. Dr. Gorton and Professor Smith are much interested in their subject and are anxious to do everything in their power to help students have an understanding of it.

SPEECH DEPARTMENT

The most dynamic force in the world today is the spoken and written word. It is speech which makes education possible. Besides its vital importance to the race, it is intimately connected with the development of character in the individual. One critic has said: "There is, among the many ways of estimating character, none more sure than that which might be called the trial by voice." The voice expresses to a great extent the personality of the speaker, and social judgments are very often unconsciously based on the use of the voice alone.

The Speech Department aims to train the student to better express the thoughts and emotions of human life through the drama, or through the oral interpretation of great literature; to sway an audience to his point of view through the power of oratory or the logic of debating; and to enable the student to understand and treat the simpler cases of speech defects in children.

"Speech is the highest expression of all educational and emotional attainment, and training for speech is training for life."

TRAINING DEPARTMENT

The Training Department is one with which every Normal College student has a definite contact at some time or other during his stay in Ypsilanti. He probably receives there the most practical training that he gets during his course.

This year the whole institution, as well as the department, has rejoiced in the acquisition of the Roosevelt High School, a building that adds much to the campus besides increasing the efficiency of the school. When the Lincoln Consolidated School was destroyed by fire, Roosevelt was proud to open its doors wide, for there was room enough in the big building to accommodate the entire Junior and Senior High Schools of the Consolidated Community. A bigger and better Lincoln School is now under con truction.

The graduates of the Normal College will often think of their practice teaching days when they are out teaching in the schools of Michigan, and will sometimes wish for a few moments of consultation with some training teacher to help them over the rough places. However, they will struggle on, endeavoring to make themselves true teachers who will make their Alma Mater proud

THE ROOSEVELT SCHOOL

The Roosevelt School deserves a special word of commendation in the AURORA of 1926. The beautiful building is a source of pride to every student, but especially to those who attended the Normal High School when it was housed on the third floor of the main building. It is generally agreed that the new building exceeds in its perfection the dearest hopes of those other days.

But a fine building and excellent equipment alone do not make a school. Roose-velt's real strength lies in her splendid corps of teachers, which has been enlarged to provide for the more efficient teaching of the old subjects and the addition of new ones to the curriculum.

May this year's propitious beginning be a true index to the future achievements of the Roosevelt High School.

COMMENCEMENT SONG OF A SENIOR

Adapted from The Morning Song of Senlin, by Conrad Aiken

'Tis commencement, Alma Mater, and at commencement, When the dawn drips promise bright as dew, I arise, I face a challenge
To do more than yet my fathers learned to do.
Memories, like stars glowing in a purple twilight, Pale now in saffron mist, seem loathe to die, And I myself, in a whirl of strange awakening, Stand benumbed with dread to break this tie.

The future taps my window, Fingers the latch of vision's door, Fortune chirps in my eager, listening ear, Repeating this, "Do more."

'Tis commencement. I stand by the mirror
And don my cap and gown,
While dreams, like waves in a hazy rose dusk
Crash upon me, swirling down.
I stand by a mirror and read from there
How meanly I fill my place
On the green earth tilting through a sphere of air,
Bathed in a flame of space.
There are kingdoms hanging above the stars,
And stars hang under a sea. . .
And Chance, golden sun in a shell of silence,
Dapples my thoughts for me. . . .

'Tis commencement, Alma Mater, and at commencement, Should I not pause in the light to remember thee? Upright and firm I stand on a star unstable, Thou art immense and lofty as a cloud, I will dedicate this moment before my mirror To thee alone, for thee I taste these tears. Accept these humble offerings, mother most kindly, I will think of thee through all my years.

The future taps my window, Fingers the gate of youth's stone wall, Fortune chirps in my eager, listening ear, Repeating this, "Try all!"

'Tis commencement. I awake from a bed of dear dreams, Shining I rise from the starless slumber of youth. The walls are about me still as in the evening, I am the same, yet different now, in truth. My college lives within me, and I in it; Can memories pale, star-like, in a coming dawn? In a sighing void I stand before my mirror, Heart deep cut, and don my gown.

There are horses neighing for hand to tame, Tossing their challenging manes, And mountains flash in my road to achievement, Their shoulders black with rains. 'Tis commencement. I stand by the mirror, And surprise my soul once more; Gay hope rises above my ceiling, There is strength beneath my floor.

'Tis commencement, Alma Mater. I ascend from darkness And depart on the winds of space for I know not where. My watch is wound, a key is in my pocket, And the sky is brightened as I ascend the stair. No shadows cross the windows, Alma Mater, With thee my god-like sun; And I will go, Thinking of thee as I might think of daybreak, And humming a tune I know.

The future taps my window, Fingers the gate of youth's stone wall, Fortune chirps in my eager, listening ear, Repeating this, "Try all!"

GOLDEN REESE.

JUNIOR CLASS

We assembled for the first time as Juniors in November, 1925, and met the officers for the year, who, according to the newly established system of election, had been chosen the spring before. The choice of the class for president was E. A. J. Wright; for vice-president, Annette Kelly; for secretary, Esther Pace; for treasurer, Stanley Hall; for athletic director, Davis J. Baer; for student council members, Dorotha Lyons and Glenn Cummings.

To act as patron, the class selected Professor Graeme O'Geran, who has done much to further the plans of the class with his ready advice and assistance.

The year was hardly under way before plans were made for the annual J-Hop. Under the direction of President Wright, Annette Kelly, Hazen Gulden, Alta Koch, Stanley Hall, and Davis Baer, all plans were carried out, and on the evening of February 19, 1926, two hundred couples met at the Armory and danced to the music of Jean Goldkette's "Breeze-Blowers." The hall was decorated with the class colors, medium blue and silver gray, in the form of streamers draped from a square center of green and white to the side walls. The lights in the center were covered so as to form cubes. Punch was served for refreshment. At ten o'clock the grand march began, led by the president of the class and his wife. The couples, four abreast, formed a large "Y" on the floor and remained in position while pictures were taken. The dance had not continued long before the air movement in the hall caused the streamers to sag to such an extent that they interfered with the dancing. It was necessary to twist them into a long barber's pole at the center of the floor. At one o'clock the dancing ceased, and the pleasant party became a memory of the past. Registrar and Mrs. C. P. Steimle were the official chaperones. Professor and Mrs. J. M. Brown, Professor Graeme O'Geran, and Mrs. F. C. Burton were the faculty members present.

The Junior Class, at the time of this writing, stands third in the standings of the inter-class games, leading the Seniors by a considerable margin.

There are approximately two hundred and twenty enrolled in the class, and a large number of the most important offices of the campus are held by its members.

ODE TO '28

Headlong we came, in motley array,
Jostling and pushing each step of the way;
We took the proverbial dip in the fountain,
Then donned the green pot, feeling big as a mountain.
Of course we were green, and we did look the part,
But what upper-classman has not had this start?

The Sophs looked upon us as "worms of the dust," Saying "Off with your pots when you pass us!" What crust! And even professors, though famed for their leniency, Tried to make book-worms of us for convenience, see? But kind fates were with '28 from the start; We're no longer green, though we once looked the part.

In inter-class football, in baseball, and track, For downright good athletes ours did not lack. There's Pray, Boyd, and Shaughnessy, Biro, and Bowen; With Fey, Scott, and Vedder, our bunch "keeps 'em goin'."

In linguistic skill, oratory, debate, No class has quite equaled our old '28. There's auburn-haired Reva and dusky-haired Ruth— If they told you, "Black's white," you'd say, "'Tis the truth." And Frederick McKay (who, 'tis said, "knows his cherries"), Agrees that Carl Forsythe is surely "the berries."

There was a song contest in March '25, When even the Seniors came out of their hive. Their peppy class president, Helen by name, For herself and her class won both credit and fame, By writing a song which the judges so wise Soon decided was easily worth second prize.

"But what of the first and third prizes'" you say. Well, we would be modest, but then—have your way—Our good-looking choir, under Parkhurst direction, Won the gold loving cup, after passing inspection; And the Varsity Club, at request of our "Bingo" Is backing the contest for this year, by Jingo!

An ode to our class would be quite out of place If we should omit, in this limited space, To praise our dear patron again and again, For "Bing," to our minds, Is a prince among men.

FRESHMAN CLASS

Spring again, and still the Freshman are Fresh and the Seniors are Somebody. But just you wait! Give us a chance. Now please don't laugh when we say that we have had wonderful dreams of what our class is going to be and what it is going to do. In fact, we finally come to the conclusion that the Class of '29 is going to be most marvelous.

Full of pep, don't you know, Jolly, independent, but not too much so. Always ready to do our share, Conservative, yet progressive, helpful, fair.

But let us tell you what we have done so far; then we will show you what we are going to do in the future.

Early in the Fall term the first year students of Michigan State Normal College met at Pease Auditorium to organize the Class of '29, electing the following officers: President, Blanchard Fagan; Vice-President, Kenneth Morrow; Secretary, Carvel Bentley; Treasurer, Robert Beal. We chose as our Faculty Advisor, Dr. McCulloch, who has been splendid in helping us.

Besides our regular business, which we have attended to zealously, we have managed to sandwich in some parties here and there. Big plans are under way now for a glorious Freshman Flurry. We all hope you will enjoy yourselves reading the reports of the party. Not that we wouldn't like everyone to come, because we would, but we couldn't possibly get a place to hold everyone that would like to attend. But anyway you'll enjoy yourselves just reading about it.

Have we given you the impression that none of us Freshmen study? Truly, we do. Just think! We have had such subjects as psychology, zoology, and now we are taking kinesiology. Maybe those words don't impress you people a great deal—but they surely did the folks at home. They, at least, are properly in awe of our knowledge.

In the remainder of the space allotted us we wish to paint a word picture of how we felt the day college opened, and of how we feel now:

Into the Normal came the valiant nine hundred, The fun-loving, jolly nine hundred. No fears had they, no cares had they, The fun-loving, jolly nine hundred, But when the Normal they'd entered, They looked around in dismay—Seniors to the front of them, Juniors to the right of them, Sophs to the left of them, But did their courage give way?

H

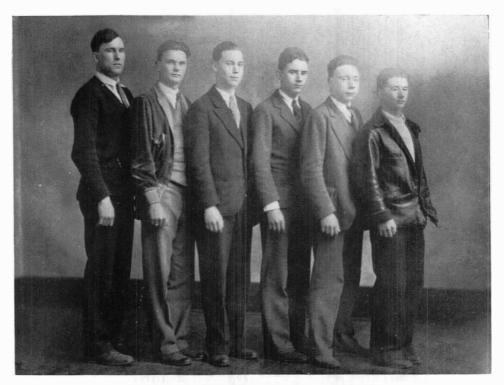

Still to the Normal come the valiant nine hundred,
The fun-loving, jolly nine hundred.
But fears have they, and cares have they,
The fun-loving, jolly nine hundred.
And when the Normal is entered
They to their classes depart—
Seniors to the front of them,
Juniors to the right of them,
Sophs to the left of them,
The Freshmen act almost as smart!

This has been an unusually prosperous year for the Y. M. C. A. on the Michigan State Normal College campus. The year's activities opened when a group of fifteen men were sent to the Geneva Conference last June, where they exchanged ideas with more than a thousand other college men on the question of making the college campus a more desirable place. In addition, the students had brought to their attention many of the problems that are perplexing the statesmen of all the civilized countries of the world.

At home, the Y. M. C. A. has conducted regular weekly meetings. In co-operation with the faculty and the University Student Christian Association, it has been able to present speakers of unusual merit, including both local men of ability and those who had a message from foreign lands as to the need for Y. M. C. A. workers, and for young men who better understand the needs of the young people of all lands. One of the most constructive speakers was Dr. Page of Jackson, who, speaking at a joint meeting of the Y. M. C. A. and the Y. W. C. A., urged a better co-operation between the two organizations and presented means by which to accomplish this desire. The University graciously furnished us with many interesting speakers, some from India, some from China, and some from Japan.

The Y. M. C. A. seeks in every possible way to serve the College campus. It maintains rooms which are open at all times to the men of the college. This year it was able to bring to Pease Auditorium the splendid production staged by the Cosmopolitan Club of Ann Arbor. The proceeds from this play go toward sending men to Lake Geneva this June. As usual, in conjunction with the Y. M. C. A., the local association sponsored the Kollege Komedy, which proved a great source of pleasure to the students at large, as well as providing the organization with funds to further their efforts in making the campus a better place in which to live and work.

The aim of the History Club is to promote a feeling of unity and fellowship among the students who are specializing in history. It attempts to accomplish its purpose by holding social gatherings and at least one excursion each year besides its regular meetings. The banquets have been great successes and the members of the club look forward to the annual trip to Port Huron by boat.

With pardonable pride the Minerva Literary Society has held its head high among its fellows this year, for it has magnificently achieved its majority, is entitled to a place in the sun, a vote among the most august of councils, a right to say "I am one of those who are 'it' by reason of my years." Twenty-one whole years it has been an entity among campus groups. For twenty-one years it has made a brave attempt to achieve its ideal. That it has not always succeeded is not the fault of Minerva; rather does it compliment the ideal, ever growing, ever unattainable as a self-respecting ideal should be. Those of us who love Minerva, who are happy to belong to her group, wish for her many, many more years of growth, greater strength in her maturity, and an eventual golden jubilee that will mark, not the end of a career, but the beginning of greater days.

The Euclidean Society was reorganized November 15, 1923, with a membership of eighty-four. Since that time the number of members has grown steadily.

The purpose of the club is to promote interest in the study of mathematics. One of its objects is to prepare students to organize clubs in junior and senior high schools. It also aims to show students the fun in mathematics.

Many interesting programs have been given through which the students have become acquainted with old mathematic books, mathematical puzzles, and interesting literature pertaining to the subject. One very interesting debate occurred this year. The subject was: "Resolved that the metric system should be adopted as the standard in the United States."

Both the annual banquet held in March and the picnic held in May have been very successful features of the organization's works.

The Student Council is an organization composed of students chosen from each class and from the various organizations on the campus to represent them in the administration of the college. The Council was organized about ten years ago, and since that time it has been ready to recognize the benefit which can be derived from establishing close co-operation between faculty and undergraduate.

The Student Council has two aims, one of which is to act as a medium of communication between the student body and the Normal College Council. It endeavors to find the thought and sentiment of the student body regarding college matters, and to bring to the Normal Council such suggestions and recommendations as may seem best to the Student Council. The Council also endeavors to preserve the useful traditions and customs of the college and to establish such new ones as promise to be for the welfare of the student body.

This year the Council has attempted to outline its duties more definitely and is now considering a revision of its constitution.

THE WOMEN'S LEAGUE

Catherine Neville. President Ethel Lathers, Vice-President Reva Jarman, Secretary Evelyn Kraft, Treasurer

In 1920, the Michigan State Normal College followed the example of many sister colleges in organizing all of the women students into a Women's League. The purpose of this organization was to bring closer together the women of the college, to maintain high standards among them, to promote their interests, and in every way insure their well-being upon the campus. Each succeeding year has witnessed greater efforts on the part of the League to fulfill this purpose. A marked progress has been shown within the last two or three years.

The past year, the League has sponsored a bloomer party, a house-presidents' dinner, a house-presidents' masquerade, and a Co-ed Prom; in the way of lectures, Judge Florence Allen, Dean Hamilton of the University of Michigan, and Miss Marjorie Six of Detroit. A new project this year was the holding of Get-Acquainted Luncheons between houses with faculty members as guests. The League has continued the Open Forum weekly discussions which grew out of the Twilight Talks.

There are two clubs within the League, one a Social Service Club of about forty girls working during the year to cheer the sick. The other is the new College League of Women Voters, a branch of the national organization. Delegates were sent to the State Convention of the League of Women Voters at Kalamazoo, to the Mid-Western Convention of the Women's Student Government Association at Bloomington, Indiana, and to the National Convention of the League of Women Voters at St. Louis, Missouri.

The ideal which this year's League hopes to pass on for future attainment is to make the League a vital and real thing to every girl, and every girl on the campus a vital and acting force in the League.

WOMEN'S ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION

EXECUTIVE BOARD

FACULTY ADVISORS

All women instructors in the Physical Education Department

CHIEF ADVISOR Mrs. Doris Chamberlain

For many years, the women of the Michigan State Normal College have expressed a desire for some sort of general athletic organization, in which all would meet on equal terms, without distinction as to curriculum followed. Only this year, under the energetic guidance of Mrs. Doris Chamberlain, of the Physical Education Department, has such an organization been brought into actual form and function. All women belonging to any campus organization were invited to join the Women's Athletic Association.

The purpose of the organization is to stimulate an interest in general athletics and dancing, health programs, and an individual physical efficiency; to bring together all of the various campus organizations for women, thus creating a spirit of friendly rivalry; to interest many rather than a few in this line of activity; to obtain a high standard of sportsman hip among the women of the college.

The sports offered for competition this year were volley ball, basketball, swimming, tennis, baseball, and quoits. It is hoped in other years to add archery, natural dancing, life-saving, leadership, and other forms of activity. Championship teams are those who have won the highest number of games in each sport offered. Competition is within the respective groups of clubs, classes, and sororities, i.e., there is none between a club and a sorority, etc.

The first banquet of the Women's Athletic Association, for the awarding of fall and winter term honors, was held March 17th at the Whitney Tea Room. A hundred peppy girls attended and joined in songs, yells, and applause for the program of music and speeches. The song contest, held for the purpose of obtaining new songs for the organization, was won by Reba Boze; the prize song is entitled, "Those W. A. A. Girls."

At the end of the school year, the sorority that has won the highest number of honor points is given a silver cup, which, if won for three years in succession, becomes the permanent trophy of that organization. Plaques are awarded the winning class and club, and placed in the gymnasium. The banquet for awarding these final honors is scheduled, at the present writing for June 10.

CHEMISTRY CLUB

Since 1910 the Chemistry Club, under the direction of Professor B. W. Peet, has grown until now it is one of the more important clubs on the Normal Campus. From its club room, number eighteen of the Science Building, have passed several men who have distinguished themselves in the field of science.

At the first meeting of this year, the newcomers were mildly initiated into the club and were informed of its purpose, which is to promote interest in practical and theoretical chemistry. By means of a debate the club convinced themselves that synthetic motor fuel is not a menace to the petroleum industry of today. Occasionally they listen to a prominent speaker such as Dr. H. B. Lewis of the Medical School of the University of Michigan, who spoke to the club this year. In the spring the members of the club take a day off and journey to some large city to see how the chemistry they have learned during the year is put into practice on a large scale in some of the manufacturing plants. With the able assistance of Professor P. S. Brundage the Chemistry Club has experienced a very successful year.

PUBLIC SCHOOL MUSIC CLUB

The Public School Music Club was organized in 1917 by the enthusiastic class of that year, and the official pin in its beauty of artistic design and finish was chosen to symbolize to all future classes and alumnae the aims and ideals of this group in its endeavor in the great field of music education.

With each added year, the club has strengthened in its influence, its usefulness, and its leadership, until today it stands prominent among the strong and active organizations on the campus.

The class of 1926, true to tradition, has maintained that sincerity of purpose, earnestness of effort, and progressiveness of spirit which has re-acted as a vital force in the group.

The Public School Music Club has for its members the graduate class of each year, and is professional as well as social in character, meeting twice a month for the study and discussion of various phases of public school music development and its relation to the child's education, These meetings are varied by the study of music memory contests, symphony concerts, artists' recitals, and not least, by the social good fellowship that leaves a lingering memory of Alma Mater, college days, and unbroken friendships.

In every high school there is a felt need for teachers who are bigger than their classroom job. Teachers must meet students, other teachers, and school patrons in social and civic gatherings. These activities are called extra-curricular and have become as important in their place as curricular activities.

The Secondary Education Club of M. S. N. C. was organized in 1925 for the purpose of emphasizing this form of activity and to prepare teachers to participate in it. Before the advent of the club on the campus there was no social agency attempting to bring together in one group students in the entire field of secondary education. This club has therefore found a new and important work.

Two types of activities have characterized the club to date, intellectual and social Meetings are held at which speakers of note discuss topics of general high school nature. Social evenings bring students from all departments together, making possible wider fields from which to make friendships.

Each year a bulletin is issued giving Superintendents of the state information concerning candidates in secondary education seeking positions. Any student who is specializing preparatory to teaching in junior or senior high school is eligible for membership. Over 150 members are enrolled and over 250 engaged in the activities of the club in 1925-26.

PORTIA LITERARY SOCIETY

In 1901, a group of sixteen girls, interested in debating, oratory, and parliamentary drill, organized for the purpose of studying these arts, and met every Friday afternoon. They called their club "Portia" because they held that character of Shakespeare's as a model and an ideal toward which they aspired to grow. For ten years, the organization kept the dual aim of literary and debating excellence, taking an active part in this field with other clubs of the campus.

Since 1911, the club has been purely literary in character, having studied many phases of the "beaux arts." Story-telling, modern drama, grand opera, the ancient tragedies, Russian literature, fairy tales, and the Nobel Prize winners—all have found a place in the interested study of the Portia girls.

The field of endeavor, the past year, has been that of painting, both classic and modern, with examples of the choice works of each artist and a study of his life and school of painting. As always, the Portia girls have had social gatherings, dinners, and picnics, and have shown a keen and active interest in campus affairs. They have worked to live up to the motto of the organization:

"How far that little candle throws its beams; So shines a good deed in a naughty world."

Wesleyan Guild is the organization representing the Methodist students on the campus. The Guild was first established in 1923, supplanting the Epworth League which had heretofore included such activities as concerned the students of the college.

The plans and work of the Guild are formulated by the cabinet in co-operation with the student director. The organization has given the students opportunity to hear live subjects discussed by able speakers through its devotional services, classes, and forums in Sunday School.

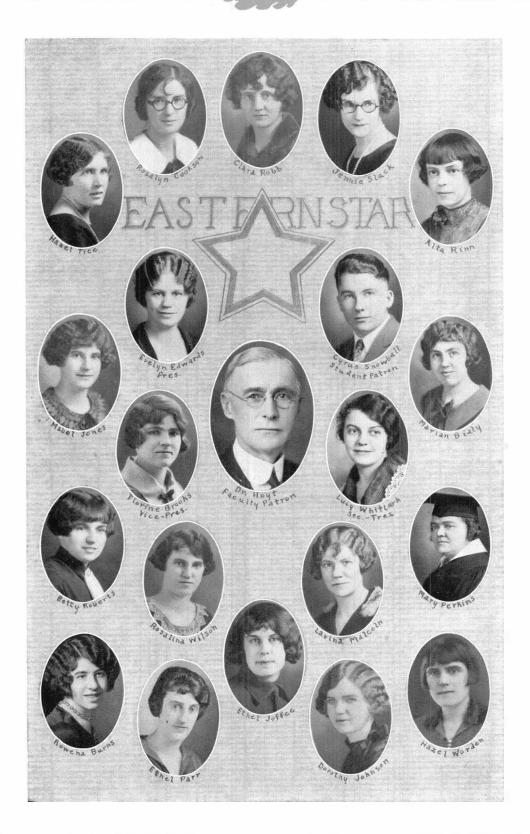

The social side of the Guild has been active. Banquets, parties, and the Sunday afternoon social hour have afforded opportunities for recreation and fellowship.

The student director who has been with us the past two years is Miss Ruth Burchell, a graduate of Northwestern University.

The personnel of the cabinet for the year 1925-1926 is as follows:

UKELELE CLUB

Many a stroke and many a strum With all finger tips in action, Hawaiian melodies produced and perfected, Make a Uke Club for your satisfaction.

The first ukelele, replacing the old Taro-patch fiddle, was produced in Hawaii in 1879, and since then has won its way to an important place in the stringed instrument family. Its music was not often heard on our campus, however, until this year, which has seen the banding together of a group of girls into the Ukelele Club. During the short existence of this club, it has acquired popularity, and is quite rapidly winning its way to a place among the active organizations of the campus.

The success of the club is due both to the efforts of Miss Marian Perkins, Y. W. C. A. music chairman and founder of the club, and to the interest, initiative, and co-operation of the members. If this spirit continues to manifest itself, the contributions of the Ukelcle Club to campus fun will assure it of a long, happy, and useful existence.

THE MICHIGAN TRAILBLAZERS

Emma Feuerstein, President J. Donald Phillips, Vice-President Florence English, Secretary-Treasurer

The Michigan Trailblazer Club is composed of students specializing in rural education. All students who enroll in the rural department thereby become members of this club. Since its organization seven years ago it has been steadily growing until today, 1925-1926, it is one of the largest and one of the most active clubs on the campus.

Its purpose is to develop group spirit, social ease, ability to speak in public, skill in conducting public meetings and other such powers as will prove helpful to teachers in rural service. This aim is realized through semi-monthly meetings. At each meeting a group of its members aided by faculty sponsors render a program which in some way is beneficial to prospective teachers in rural schools. Miss Ella Smith of the Rural Education faculty is patroness of the Club and with the aid of Dr. M. S. Pittman, Director of Rural Education, guides its activities.

One of the outstanding activities of this year was the induction of the Club into the Collegiate Country Life Club of America which is a national organization for the promotion of better country life. This ceremony took place during the Mid-year Conference.

The Michigan Trailblazers agree that the club meetings are pleasurable and profitable from the first weenie-roast in September to the grand Hatchet-Sharpener in May.

THE MEN'S UNION

OFFICERS

Frank Manley, President Donald Sutherland, Secretary James Barclay, Vice-President Leith Wetzel, Treasurer

The Men's Union this year was led by Frank Manley. It is impossible to give too much credit to the president of the Union, for it takes much time and effort to make successful the various activities sponsored by the organization.

One of these activities was the trip to Kalamazoo with the football team. About eight hundred students, including the team and the band, boarded the special train chartered by the Union. The band played on the train, and a syncopating orchestra was assembled in the baggage car to play for the dancers. Tho e who did not wish to dance were singing, yelling, playing cards, or engaged in deep, official discussions as to the outcome of the approaching game. As it was nearly noon when the train arrived in "Kazoo," the Ypsi-ites, after parading through the main streets of the town, disbanded for "eats." Afterwards, while parading to the field, they kept the peddlers of the city buy selling their produce, for everyone was decorating himself with celery. It is not necessary to say that they saw a real story-book game—one of the most exciting ever played in the M. I. A. A.

The next big event was the Men's Mixer, an annual affair whose purpose is to help the men on the campus become better acquainted. Here the men saw good boxing, and heard the "Rub Room Quartette" and Ford's musicians. All this was topped by excellent food prepared by the chef, Del Morse.

The final event of the year was the "Campus Follies," a musical comedy, directed by Mr. Pierce. The Union staged the comedy two nights and cleared about one hundred fifty dollars. It is to be hoped that something of this sort may be done each year.

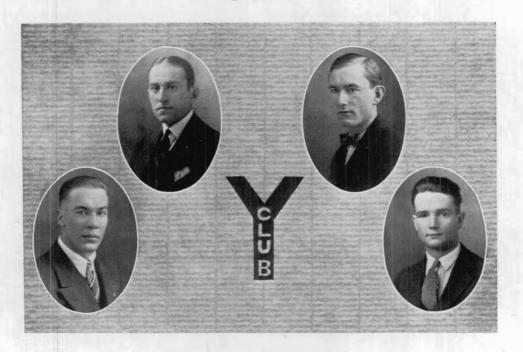

PHYSICAL EDUCATION CLUB

OFFICERS

David Brown, President Isabel Cantrick, Vice-President Edith Cooper, Secretary Ruth Boughner, Treasurer

The purpose of the Physical Education Club is to bring the members together socially, and to promote interest, enthusiasm, and co-operation among the faculty and students of the department.

A number of parties and meetings held in the gymnasium have been very enjoyable and have brought the members in contact with recognized leaders of physical education. One enjoyable feature of the year was the teaching of old-time dances by Mr. Lovett, Henry Ford's dancing instructor. The club this year sent a delegate to the Convention of the Middle Western Physical Education Society which was held in Minneapolis. The publication of the department, The Javelin, keeps former members of our club well informed of passing events.

Dear Friends:

We are submitting to you for approval a copy of our most recent publication, a goodly volume wherein you will find drawings, photographs, jokes, and other matter concerned with your interests and activities during the past year. The task of collecting and arranging this material has been difficult. Often the editor has gone about with her brow most unbecomingly furrowed, while at times even the equal temper of the business manager has suffered. But now, as we review the year, we realize that it is the delightful happenings, the laughable incidents, that we remember. We wish that we might share with you personally the pleasure that we have experienced. As this is impossible, we hope that a bit of the fun and good fellowship has crept into the pages of this glorified memory book—The Aurora of 1926.

The Michigan State Normal College Band was organized November 1, 1924. The initial appearance was made here at the Kalamazoo-Ypsilanti football game when forty-eight uniformed men paraded the city streets and played at the football field. Last year concerts were given at Northville, Milan, and Hudson. Other trips included the football game at Albion and the M. I. A. A. track and field meet at Hillsdale.

This year the band has played several out-of-town concerts and made other appearances including the Kalamazoo College football game at Kalamazoo, the National Motorbus Show in Detroit, and the Michigan State Teachers' Association in Jackson. The band has played at assemblies, football, basketball, and baseball games, and other events in Ypsilanti.

Much credit is due Mr. Barnhill, who has devoted a great deal of time to make the band a success, and to Captain Wilfred Wilson, who has directed the band since its organization.

Although the band has been smaller this year, a campaign is being started which will eventually give the Michigan State Normal College a sixty-piece band.

Among the newer and more unusual organizations on the campus is the Girls' Varsity Band, organized this year under the direction of Captain Wilfred Wilson, of Ann Arbor. The organization is yet young, but if the initiative and fine co-operative spirit of its members and the ability of its conductor have any significance, the Girls' Band will undoubtedly become important as a campus activity.

Frederick Alexander, Conductor

Detroit News Editorial (Cyril Arthur Player)

"Among the best choirs in this country is the Ypsilanti Normal, which Frederick Alexander has brought to such a proud place of national repute. It does not need the filip of local pride to commemorate the rise of this splendid organization, for it may be mentioned in any company and in music centers far from Michigan with the assurance that prompt and hearty recognition will be forthcoming."

Friding, Alexande

Detroit News Article (R. J. McLaughlin) "An annual event which Detroit's musical public has learned to anticipate with eagerness is the pre-holiday appearance of the Ypsilanti Normal Choir, in Orchestra Hall. This pleasant thing took place yesterday afternoon, Mr. Kolar and the Detroit Symphony Orchestra yielding half of the program to Mr. Alexander and his very fine organization.

"Much fame attaches to the Ypsilanti Choir because, for years, Mr. Alexander has labored with ardent enthusiasm toward a very lofty ideal. This ideal is nothing short of perfection in choral singing. . . .

"The personnel of the choir inevitably alters somewhat from year to year, and, over a span of years, changes entirely. But its performance is constant. Each Christmas time we of Detroit remark the same perfection in modulation, the same husbanding of resources in the construction of a climax, and the same unerring precision in attack and release. "

Detroit News, April 14, 1926

"The Michigan State Normal College Choir, under the direction of Frederick Alexander, probably has never sung before an audience more exacting than that which heard it last night in a representative program at the Cass Technical High School Auditorium.

"The performance was arranged especially for the delegation attending the nineteenth annual Music Supervisors' National Conference, now in its third day. The audience consisted of nearly 1,500 supervisors. And it was an audience as appreciative as it was exacting.

"At one of the first general sessions of the conference, Dr. Thomas H. Briggs, of Columbia University, in an address on music appreciation, said in effect that music was art when it awoke in the hearer a sincere emotional response. On such a premise, then, the choir's singing last night was art. For the response to it was as sincere as it was spontaneous. It is presumed that the response was a manifestation of emotion.

"Church music is nothing if not emotional. And the choir's performance of passages—the Et Incarnatus, the Crucifixus, and the Et Resurrexit—from John Sebastian Bach's Mass in B Minor, was emotional in its essence, but at no time unrestrained.

"A majestic piece of music is the Mass in B Minor, and a majestic interpretation did the choir give such parts of it as were included in the program. In the Crucifixus and the Resurrexit particularly did the choir's 150 voices excel in their precision, their shadings, and their nuances."

FREDERICK B. McKAY
Director of Public Speaking

PUBLIC SPEAKING

Student activities in public speaking have been directed by the following officers composing the Oratorical Board: President, Kirk Seaton; Vice-President, William Underwood; Secretary, Alice Bradbury; Pi Kappa Delta Representative, Willard Morris; Faculty Representative, Professor McKay. This board arranges the numerous details in connection with the local contests, and, through its president and faculty representative, affiliates the work with the intercollegiate contests in oratory and debate.

In the field of oratory there have been inspiring results. The tryouts brought out twenty-three contestants, and the final college contest resulted in the selection of Ruth Thompson and Carl Forsythe, both sophomores, as the college orators. The state contest was entertained royally by the Normal College on March 5th. Miss Thompson presented her oration, "Leadership in a Democracy," in the afternoon contest, and while giving a good account of herself, was awarded sixth place. In the evening, Mr. Forsythe as first among seven speakers spoke upon the theme, "For Those Yet To Be." Such was the excellence of his thought and the poise and eloquence of his delivery that he received four firsts from the six judges, thus winning the state contest by a considerable margin. He next entered the Eastern Divisional Contest at the University of Kentucky, where he was chosen to enter the national contest at Evanston, Illinois, April 30th. There he won second place for Ypsilanti among one hundred forty colleges in fifteen different states.

Debating was this year an outstanding interest. There were four men's and two women's teams in the field. While most of the debates were of the decision type, we experimented also with the forum discussion, so that no definite record of victories and defeats can be made. It enabled the debaters to get considerable more experience than would otherwise have been possible. The season opened with a triangular women's debate with Western State Normal School and Olivet College. The affirmative team, consisting of Evelyn Cooney, Grace Bravender, and Ernestine Anderson met Olivet there in a forum discussion, while Gladys Lackie, Myrta Styckle, and Alice Bradbury of the negative met and were defeated by Western State Normal on the home platform. They met Heidelberg University in a split-team debate on March 19th, and are scheduled to meet Ferris Institute in a single debate in the spring term.

The men's first-line teams—Garland H. Harrell, Willard Morris, and Kirk Seaton, affirmative; Harold Westlake, Harry R. Meyering, and William Underwood, negative—opened the season with debates at Owosso and Durand on February 5th with Alma College, the affirmative losing and the negative winning. On February 12th, they entered the Michigan Debating League contests, the affirmative defeating Western State Normal School, and the negative losing to Kalamazoo College. On the 19th the teams met the Detroit College of Law in forum discussion, while on the 26th, in Michigan Debating League contests, the affirmative lost to Central State Normal School, while the negative won from Hope College. The second-line teams were made up as follows: Guy L. Baker, Joseph Wendt, and James E. Latture, affirmative; and Francis E. Lord, Clarence J. Messner, and Herbert S. Hertzler, negative. The affirmative team met Flint Junior College on the question of adopting the proposed Child Labor amendment and lost, February 26th. On March 12th they met teams from Central State Normal School in forum discussions at Elsie and Corunna. The affirmative team is scheduled to meet Ferris Institute at Charlotte, April 30th, while the negative team will meet Ferris Institute at Big Rapids, April 28th, and Northern State Normal School at Marquette, April 30th. This concludes the season of official college debates.

This narrative would not be complete without mentioning the honor forensic society, now firmly established as an enthusiastic campus organization—Pi Kappa Delta. The chapter now numbers ninety-three, with thirty-four members on the campus. As a result of three years of economies of various sorts, it had over five hundred dollars in its treasury in February. It then conceived the idea of a forensic scholarship to encourage future public speakers, and set aside two hundred dollars as the beginning of such a fund. It also sent the president, Willard Morris, and two other delegates—Kirk Seaton and William Underwood—to the national convention of the society at Estes Park, Colorado, March 29th-April 1st. The first two entered the convention debating contest, and Mr. Underwood the extempore contest. The annual initiation took place at the home of the patron, Professor McKay on April 7th, when seventeen students and one faculty member were initiated. Extensive preparations are going forward for the sixth annual banquet to be held at the Huron Hotel on May 7th.

Awards to students in intercollege contests is now on a much more encouraging basis, gifts from generous citizens of Ypsilanti making possible the distribution of considerably more than two hundred dollars in prizes. Thus the present year has been highly successful in the realm of platform activities.

FOR THOSE YET TO BE

We moderns little appreciate how local life was in centuries past. Our range of vision has been widened by all the accumulated knowledge of the race. . . . Civilizations arose and fell within circumscribed areas. The culture of Athens was possessed by a people living within a territory little larger than a modern county. One city gave to the world the foundations of modern law. Man's views of life were as restricted as was the little territory in which he lived. He could not comprehend the size of his earth nor the vastness of his universe.

Carl Forsythe

But the twentieth century is beating down the barriers to a broader view. . . . Marvelous inventions and startling discoveries are making the world one vast neighborhood. . . . Thus, for the first time, man is not only seeing and realizing the totality of things, but he is harnessing the forces of the universe and making them do his bidding.

This enlarging appreciation of the whole of life is thrusting upon our attention problems as far-reaching as our wider view of life itself. . . . But among these problems, important as they are, is one so fundamental to our happiness and prosperity that it includes all others. I refer to the problem of life itself; more specifically, to the life that is being transmitted by the fathers and mothers of this generation to those of the next. . . . This presents the paramount problem of the twentieth century.

Will you not be interested in some facts not new to students of the problem, which seem to me important? Dr. Martin W. Barr, a prominent authority, not long ago published a significant survey. He points out that in the state of Pennsylvania alone there are some four thousand confined cases of insanity, feeblemindedness and epilepsy. Yet even this is not the alarming feature of his report. He states that there are nearly four times as many insane, morally degenerate, and physically incapable at large as there are confined. In the state of Wisconsin there are more people in her infirmaries, insane asylums, and prisons than in her state university. Multiply these numbers by 48 and we readily realize the gigantic proportions of this, the fundamental problem before the American people today.

Now let me illustrate the principle involved. In Missouri records furnish most discomforting evidence. Now, an illustration from another field. The farmer appreciates this principle of transmission and applies it to improve his farm animals and grain. In the case of wheat it was attended with marvelous results. Do you know the romantic story of Marquis wheat? In 1903 Prof. Saunders of Toronto University crossed Red Fife with Hard Red Calcutta, thus blending the early ripening qualities of the one with the unusual baking and milling properties of the other, and producing one plant of superb wheat. This single sample under his selective guidance has reproduced itself until today it constitutes 90 per cent of all the wheat grown in Canada, and 60 per cent of that grown in the United States. It has added millions to the wealth of both countries and is helping to feed a hungry world. Thus are good as well as bad traits transmitted.

These are the conditions that constitute our problem. Dr. Albert E. Wiggam forcibly states it when he says, "Our civilization if left to itself will become self-destructive. There is no secret about it. Farmers since Eden have been selecting their best plants for parents. But in human society all is different; we make every effort to save the worst and let the best take care of themselves."

What is the way out? The story of Kallikak tells us. Marquis wheat tells us. We must select the best, or at least better stock, for parents. First, stop the stream of degeneracy. But that is only part of our duty. The findings of science and the modern laboratory must be made the common knowledge of the layman. Youth and maturity alike must be informed about these great truths of life. We must know that there are fundamental laws of reproduction and that these laws apply with as much precision and regularity as the laws of any physical science. We must learn that grapes grow not from thorns, nor figs from thistles, but that like produces like. . . . Marriage must be based on science and flooded with the new and higher romance of race building through happy, well-born children. That is the ultimate solution of our problem.

"As I watch the American nation," says Dr. McDougall of Harvard, "speeding gaily with invincible optimism down the road to certain destruction, I seem to contemplate one of the saddest tragedies in the history of mankind. We wonder whether she has reached the crest of her power, to descend, at no distant day, down the long slopes to dissolution. We know that the grandeur of Rome has long since passed into the night. America falters, but it is not yet too late. No, we must believe that her golden age still beckons to nobler achievement. We must heed the handwriting on the wall and carry on for a greater and grander civilization. Oh, America! "Humanity with all its fears, with all its hopes of future years, is hanging breathless on thy fate!" Upon our action depend the welfare, the destiny of unborn millions. Shall we live for our day alone, or shall our vision penetrate the future and our work make possible the abundant life, with health, happiness, promise for generations yet to be? If I have any message tonight, it is to America's students. To you, and you, and you, the world looks for answer. What shall our answer be?

LEADERSHIP IN A DEMOCRACY

From its very beginning democracy has traditionally stood for the equality of man. Our forefathers fashioned the government upon this principle. It found expression in our historic documents and in the utterances of our leaders. In the decades following the establishment of the nation that equality has been interpreted to mean that all men are equal, equal in physical possibilities, equal in intellect, equal in their social outlook—in fact, equally endowed with all those qualities which tend to make a perfect democracy.

Ruth Thompson

But science, as in so many other fields, has entered here rudely to thrust aside this century-old assumption to which we have so tenaciously clung, and to insist that equality is for the most part an illusion.

An appreciation of the fact of inequality cannot but produce a profound change in our attitude toward democracy. official report of the Surgeon General of the United States Army states that out of the 1,700,000 men given the Army Alpha test, 41/2% were rated as belonging to class A. That is, only 41/2% possessed very superior intelligence. Nine per cent belonged to class B, or possessed superior As the classification conintelligence. tinued, it included the masses, and at the bottom were listed 25% as of inferior and even moronic intelligence. What was determined about this large group would doubtless be true of the country as a whole. The group of men all important to us is the smallest in this great mass. It consists of those few gifted individuals who hold in their hands the power to control the destinies of nations. . . . In America should we ignore the contribution of a number of leaders so small as to be counted upon the fingers how different our history would be! Washington, Henry, Webster, Lincoln, Roosevelt, Wilson—to such men we owe the distinctive characteristics that make Americanism today.

America's reliance in the future, as it has been in the past, must be upon her social, her political, her industrial, her educational, and her religious pioneers, and her vital problem is to create the conditions which shall make such leadership ever possible. What is the situation in the field of politics? Here, if anywhere, real talent and initiative should be encouraged. Do we find here, as a rule, men who have pledged themselves to the service of the public and who are willing to sacrifice for the accomplishment of their ideals? Is it too much to say that the menace of democracy lies in her inability to recognize her potential leaders? Men know that character and idealism are held up to ridicule during political campaigns and often through administrations. Therefore, many a man who might have proved an inspired leader in the realm of ideals has turned his great talents into the sordid pursuit of money.

Now how shall leadership be made a more vital, dominating force in our national life? . . . The first essential for the encouragement of leadership is open mindedness. The man of open mind will not permit prejudice to close his thinking to new proposals and new situations. He is always waiting for more information. No fostering of leadership is possible without the open mind.

But to be open minded only is not enough. His must also be the informed mind. Problems emerge from facts and right solutions depend on having facts. To recognize a good idea he must know what a good idea is. To recognize a good man, as William James says, he must know what a good man is. The greatest contribution any one of us can make to democracy is to educate himself along these lines—not education in the restricted sense of the word, training in high school and college—but rather knowledge of world affairs, a broad outlook, and most important, an understanding of his fellowmen.

And where shall our great task of making conditions favorable to the open and informed mind be carried on? Must it not be among the masses, in the midst of the almost countless communities which make up the nation's life?

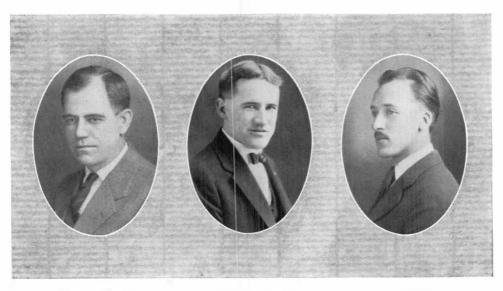

Here, we may give ourselves to our great opportunity. As teachers in the public schools we can, like the quaint but scholarly old Domsie in that Scotch tale, "Beside the Bonnie Brier Bush," make it our business to find "the lad o' pairts"—to make knowledge popular, to develop initiative, to connect school with life. All these are conducive to the making of the open minded and informed community.

We Americans have always been worshippers at the shrine of commercialism. We have gained for ourselves a reputation for making money. Is it not time we stopped to ask: "Is this the most important achievement we can master?" My friends, the worth of your town and mine consists not in the merchandise it has sold, nor the money it has saved. The real measure of its worth is the number of men of thought and action it has produced and is going to produce. . . . Fellow students, the world rightly looks to us as the aggressive force in shaping the community conditions in which human worth grows. That is our task and privilege—the fostering of leadership in a democracy.

JAMES BURRELL 1905-1926

The death of James Burrell has brought great sorrow to the Kappa Phi Alpha limmy was initiated into Fraternity. Kappa Phi Alpha in the winter term of 1924, and during the two years that he was a member he won the love and respect of all of his brothers by the cheerful way in which he shouldered his share of the responsibilities connected with his fraternity life. He was looked upon as possessing those true qualities which marked him as an all 'round man, and his passing leaves a gap in the Brotherhood which will be difficult to fill. The memory of Brother James Burrell remains sacred to Kappa Phi Alpha.

Twenty-four members of the Alpha Tau Delta Fraternity answered to their names at roll call at the beginning of the Fall term of 1925. Seven new men were pledged, and were initiated early in the Winter term. Professor Brundage was initiated as a Faculty Member, and Carl Erikson joined the ranks of the Faculty Members by accepting a position in the mathematics department. The Fraternity is proud of its Faculty Members.

Alpha Tau Delta stands for character, leadership, and scholarship. Many of its members hold responsible positions on the campus. In scholarship the Alpha Tau Delta stands first. We have had a very successful year, and are looking forward to many more.

1925 SCHEDULE

Detroit City College at Ypsilanti Interclass at Ypsilanti Interscholastic at Ypsilanti M. I. A. A. Championship at Hillsdale State Intercollegiate at East Lansing Michigan A. A. U. at Belle Isle

Starting with the M. I. A. A. the cross-country team won that championship with the low score of 23. All five Ypsi runners placed in the first ten. Then came the intercollegiate meet which Ypsi won handily with the score of 49, all of the runners placing in the first twenty. At the Belle Isle meet the team score was 61, which won the amateur championship of the state for Ypsilanti.

Captain Smith was again one of the leading harriers in the state, although outclassed slightly by his teammate, Potter, who by winning every race was the outstanding runner in Michigan intercollegiate cross-country running this fall. Byron Boyd came through to win his second letter by placing well in every mect. Bill Bailey, although a freshman, was one of the best distance runners in action and has promise of greater development. Scott and Ryan ran nearly even all season and kept the score of the team from being seriously threatened. Both runners expressed a dislike for the sport so they should be given much credit for helping the team to the championships.

Coached by Elton Rynearson, a former star and graduate of Michigan State Normal College, the football team won every game on its schedule and finished on top in the M. I. A. A. gridiron race last fall. The forward wall was strong and no team was successful in attempting gains through it. The backfield was fast enough to carry the ball into the opponent's territory and often over the goal. It was not until the last game of the year that Ypsi was pressed to win. With only a few minutes to play Ypsi rushed the ball down the field and won the game 7-6 amid the cheers of the five hundred students who had followed the team to Kalamazoo.

Ypsilanti finished the basketball season in second place in the Michigan Inter-collegiate League, having been defeated by Kalamazoo College, winners of the championship, and by Hillsdale College. Outside of the conference the only team to defeat Ypsilanti was Western State Normal. Western's team, however, was defeated by Ypsi later in the season. Although the quintette was fast and showed brilliant teamwork that baffled its opponents, a slump at an inopportune time lost the chance for the title. Only three men will be lost to next year's team—Sam Pfahler, Chester Haupt and Joe Schwall.

UNDEFEATED STILL?

Will Michigan State Normal thinclads remain undefeated through the 1926 season and keep an unstained record for four consecutive years, is the question that is uppermost in the minds of Ypsi track followers. After winning dual meets with Western Normal on indoor and outdoor tracks, the indoor meet 53 to 42 and outdoor 87 to 44. Detroit City College yielded indoors 53½ to 41½. With two of the leading track teams of Michigan so easily defeated Ypsilanti now points to a bigger year than it has had yet in track. The Intercollegiate meet will be a big test for the Green and White tracksters where the cream of the Collegiate stars will be gathered to win the honors.

Nine meets are on the schedule arranged for Ypsilanti by Coach McCulloch. There are seven dual meets and two intercollegiate meets scheduled for the racket men.

Ypsilanti will be represented in the state meet at Western State Normal May 21 and 22 and in the M. I. A. A. championship rounds for the last time, June 4 and 5.

Michigan Normal has won the M. I. A. A. championship for three straight years in tennis but because of the elimination of co-eds from participation in intercollegiate sports, will be handicapped this year considerably as they were responsible for the victories of the two previous seasons.

Coach McCulloch is grooming seven men for the coming season. They are: Frank Manley and Arthur Mowery, veterans of last year, Donald Draper, Howard Helfrich, Robert Beal, Thomas Reed and Leith Wetzel.

Michigan State Normal College had an especially good year at the Relay Meets, both in and out of the State. Competing against one of the classiest fields of college medley teams that had ever made its appearance at the Drake Relays, Ypsilanti finished first, having led the other teams the entire distance. For the first time Ypsilanti was represented in the Illinois Relays and Drake Relays. In the fomer, the Green and White were nosed out at the tape but became National Champions in the latter. At the Michigan State Indoor carnival Ypsi brought home two relay trophies for victories in the 880 and two-mile relays. The Ohio Relays saw Ypsilanti climb to the top of the college division by winning So-yard and distance medley relays, placing second in 2-mile relay, third in triathlon, fourth in high hurdles and third in shot put.

The relay teams have won two 2.4-inch silver cups, three bronze statues, nine gold watches, eight gold medals, four silver medals and one bronze medal.

CHAMPIONS AGAIN?

For two seasons Michigan State Normal has dominated in baseball by winning the Michigan Intercollegiate Championships in 1924 and 1925 consecutively. In the opening games of the 1926 sea on Ypsilanti aims toward another championship, taking games from Albion (5-4) and Kalamazoo (14-0). While there were few veterans to begin with, Coach Rynearson has found a winning combination that has brilliant fielding ability and a powerful batting attack. Captain Sam Pfahler is the pitcher upon whom the team must place their hopes for a winning year.

GENERAL GIRLS' MEET

The General Girls' All College Indoor Meet was held Thursday night, March 11. The Kindergarten Primary and Rural Education Girls competed against the Intermediate and High School groups. The events were as follows: Stunt relay; dash and throw relay; French Reel; Parisian Polka; hop, step, and jump; obstacle race; and a mass volley ball game. A fine spirit was shown by the two groups, even though all the events but the obstacle relay were won by the Kindergarten Primary and Rural Education girls.

SPECIALIZING GIRLS' MEET

The twenty-third annual indoor meet between the Freshmen and Sophomore Physical Education Girls was held Wednesday, March 3rd. The Sophomores, winners of last year's exciting event, were victorious with a score of 46-5. The score scarcely reveals the fight the victors were forced to make in order to win the various events, taking many only by a single inch or point. Much enthusiasm was shown by the participants, the Freshmen fighting all the way to the end.

GIRLS' TUMBLING TEAM

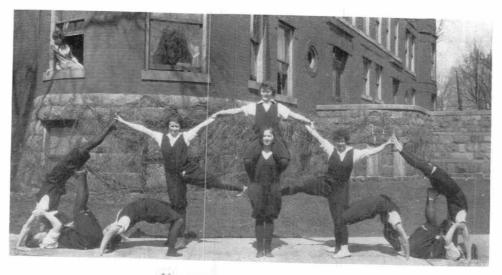

The Girls' Tumbling Team made its first public appearance this year at the College Circus, held February 17th and 18th. Their part of the program included tumbling and pyramid building, under the direction of Mrs. V. B. Chamberlain, of the Physical Education Department.

Among the pyramids built were the fan, the lean-out, the pile-up, the simple four, the ensemble, the stairs, and the finale.

NATURAL DANCING

Within us all lies the creative impulse—an impul e which finds but scant expression in this world of our. The art of natural dancing, here, under the supervision and inspiration of Miss Alice Naffz provides a satisfying co-ordination of mind and soul and body—a symphony of lovely and expressive movements in re ponse to music.

As the art of the dance develop in the Normal curriculum, it finds an ever greater following. Besides being a source of pleasure and natural joyous response to those who actively participate—natural dancing is carving for it elf a niche in community favor.

The program on December 14—a lovely combination of color, movement and thythm—attracted almost as many townspeople as students. Through the season natural dancing students have entertained at numerous school and town functions.

Some people may have wondered why Kirk Seaton was so anxious for the rules to be changed, but if they could see him sitting on the "told tone teps tatching told" 209 N. Summit, they would cease to wonder.

G. Z. (after trip with S. H., to Detroit on Aurora business)—"It was so nice to have Stanley along with me. You know, whenever I go to Detroit, I get lost, but Stanley was just like a compass. I'd say, 'Where are we?' and Stanley would stop and point north.'

A certain young man on our campus, while driving up from Dearborn, ran into another car. The other driver, very angry, demanded two dollars damages. The offender, however, induced the man to accept seventy-five cents. Three guesses what nationality.

Gwinnell—Now A. K., that's a good car, that old Ford of mine. You had better get_it now—it's a bargain.

Gardner—Will it cost much to fix it up?

Gwinnell—Not so much. You would just have to buy all new tires, fix up the steering gear, get a new top and windshield, and have the valves ground.

Gardner-But Russell, if I get all that done, will it run? Now, on the level, will it run?

Gwinnell—Well, on the level it's not so good, but it sure can coast down-hill.

A valentine addressed to the president arrived at a certain rooming house for men. Chalmer Young seized upon it, as he held this lofty and dignified office. He opened it and read-

Che r up little iceberg, Don't cry, don't faint, If loving is sinning You're surely a saint.

Thinking it to be a broad hint he addressed it to Miss Marian Demaree, whose company he often fancied, but before sending it he wrote boldly across the face: "How about yourself?"

Heard in the Aurora Office

S. Hall—"Your name please?" Poor Girl-"Lovissa wa--."

S. Hall—"Have you signed a contract?"

Poor Girl-"Yes, I d-

S. Hall—"Here, Harris, get this girl's contract."

B. Harris—"What's her name?"
S. Hall—"Clarissa——"

Poor Girl-"No, it's Lovissa wa-

S. Hall—"Never mind what she says! Her name is Lovissa."

G. Westphal (on being told that a member of our student body came from Mississippi) "Mississippi? Mississippi? Let me see, is that a state?" Irate Mississippian—"No, it's a mineral water!"

Foster—"Snarey, do you know that I passed one of those mythology exams?" Snarey—"On the level?"

Foster—"What difference does it make?"

B. Burdett (at end of long evening): "Well, I'm off." A. Beck (with a weary sigh): "I had thought so all evening."

Wright (a week after Ann Arbor "J" Hop)—"Mr. O'Geran, could you meet a committee to go over plans for the 'J' Hop?" O'Geran—"Not yet; I'm not myself yet. You see, I went to the hop in Ann Arbor."

Dr. Harrold—Mr. Logie, can you tell me any advantages of studying Shakespeare? Mr. Logie (after considerable deliberation)—Yes, it helps you to appreciate good literature.

Dr. Harrold-You see no other advantages?

Mr. Logie-No, I think not.

Dr. Harrold—Why, don't you see the great advantages in building up a vocabulary? After studying Shakespeare, when you see a bow-legged man you need not say: Oh! Look at that bow-legged man! But instead you might say "What ho! What manner of man is this, that wears his pants in parenthesis?

Should the Faculty Be Asked to Count?

Miss Boughner (on a cold March night, counting months till summer comes): "Let's see, six months from now it should be warmer—April—May—June; June—July—August. Yes, it should be warm in August."

What's Wrong With This Picture?

A Freshman in the library goes to the rail and keeping head well down asks a question in a quavering voice.

L.L.S. (thinking to solve all difficulty): "Have you looked in card catalog?" Freshman (thoroughly aroused): "I said, 'Where could I find Miss Andrews?

Miss Eckert—"Mr. Manley, can you give an example of an 'epic pome?" Mr. Manley (after several minutes of thought) "I can think of only one now." Miss Eckert—"What is the name of it?"

Mr. Manley—"I don't know; but it goes like this:
"Though deadly germs in kisses hide E'en at the cost the price is small, 'Tis better far to have kissed and died Than never to have kissed at all."

What Happened in the Gortons' Woodshed?

Miss Stowe (upon meeting Dr. Gorton)—"Dr. Gorton, what shall I do? Your son refuses to work in my class. Dr. Gorton—"Is that so? Well, I'll have to see about that tonight."

Miss Beal—"Mr. Snarey, what outside reading have you done for the course?" Snarey—"Well, uh-uh—well, I've read "The Tale of Two Cities" by Silas Marner.

Mr. Wilson (during conference) "Mr. Loomis, what is a comma?"

Mr. Loomis (coming back many miles all in a hurry) "Comma, comma—why, that is something you drop into once in a while."

Mr. Wilson—"Well, try to drop them into your papers a little oftener."

Evils of Practice Teaching

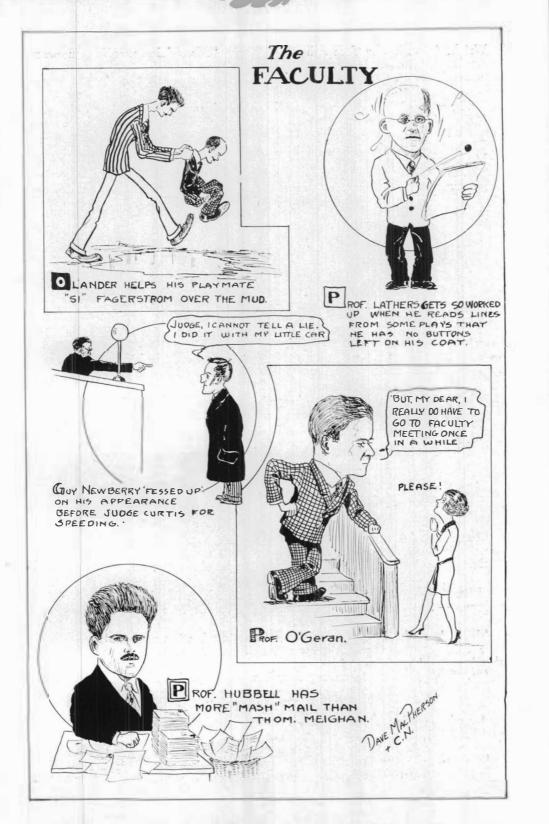

A student teacher at Roosevelt High while teaching a world history class after socialized recitation plan, in order to make the class interesting, said:

"My husband says that in the French Army the rations were very scanty."

Bright Boy—"Why don't you have your husband come up and tell us about it?"

Student Teacher—"I asked him to come this afternoon. I expect him any time."

At this critical moment the door opened and Mr. Chamberlain came in.
